Security Report: Labour Party Conference 2025

Executive Summary

The Labour Party Conference 2025 is scheduled to take place in Liverpool from Sunday, September 28, to Wednesday, October 1, 2025. This event features speeches, training sessions, policy discussions, and fringe events hosted by organisations such as Labour List, the Institute for Government, the Northern Health Science Alliance, Labour Together, the Fabian Society, and the New Statesman.

The conference is expected to attract thousands of delegates, politicians, and media personnel, making it a high-profile target for protests and disruptions.

Based on publicly available information (as the provided document link was inaccessible due to JavaScript requirements), multiple protest actions are planned around the conference, primarily focusing on issues such as Palestine, healthcare, austerity, and energy policy. These actions could lead to crowd gatherings, potential clashes, and operational disruptions.

Key risks include public order incidents, security breaches, and reputation damage to the event. Recommendations emphasise enhanced monitoring, coordination with law enforcement, and contingency planning.

This report assesses threats based on announced protest schedules and historical patterns at similar events.

Conference Overview

- Dates and Location: September 28 – October 1, 2025, at the ACC Liverpool (Arena and Convention Centre Liverpool) and surrounding venues, including fringe events at locations like Maray Restaurant in the Albert Docks.
- Key Activities: Inspiring speeches from senior Labour figures (e.g., Secretaries of State, Ministers, MPs, Metro Mayors), policy panels, training sessions, and networking events. Fringe programs include discussions on government priorities, health, and societal issues.
- Attendance: Expected to include party members, elected officials, stakeholders, and media. Secure zones will be in place for main events, with some fringe activities outside these areas.

Identified Protest Actions

Several groups have announced demonstrations coinciding with the conference, often framed as “actions” to pressure the Labour government on domestic and international policies.

These are drawn from public announcements and could align with the “Action Schedule” referenced in the document title. Protests are scheduled before and during the conference.

Potentially escalating tensions.

- National Demonstration for Palestine (September 27, 2025, 12:00 PM, Liverpool): Organised by the Palestine Solidarity Campaign and Stop the War Coalition. Focuses on ending Israel’s actions in Gaza and criticising Labour’s complicity. Expected to draw large crowds to bring the message directly to the conference.
- Protests Over Palestine Action Ban (Starting September 28, 2025): A week-long series of nationwide protests beginning at the conference in response to the proscription of Palestine Action. Could involve direct actions at conference venues, posing distraction risks for the Prime Minister.
- Save Liverpool Women’s Hospital Campaign (September 28, 2025): Campaigners protesting hospital cuts or closures, taking their message to the conference site.

- People's Assembly Protest: Welfare Not Warfare (September 28, 2025): Against austerity, genocide, and for justice. Part of broader anti-austerity actions.
- Care Providers Demonstration (September 29, 2025): Mobilized by care sector workers across the UK, focusing on funding and policy issues. Expected to be significant in scale, Energy For All Protest (October 1, 2025, 9:00 AM – 2:30 PM, The Wheel, Liverpool): Demanding energy policy reforms, timed to coincide with the conference's final day.
- Additional Context on Palestine Motions: Labour has ruled against debating dozens of motions on Palestine, which may fuel on-site discontent and impromptu protests. These actions are largely peaceful in intent but could attract counter-protesters or escalate if met with restrictions.

Threat Assessment Potential Risks

- Crowd Management and Public Order: Large demonstrations (e.g., Palestine rallies) could lead to overcrowding near venues like the ACC Liverpool or Albert Docks. Historical precedents at party conferences include blockades or clashes with police.
- Disruptions to Events: Protests may target high-profile sessions, such as speeches by the Prime Minister or ministers, potentially interrupting proceedings or requiring evacuations. Fringe events outside secure zones are particularly vulnerable.
- Security Breaches: Infiltration risks from activists posing as delegates, or cyber threats like doxxing of attendees. Healthcare and energy protests could involve symbolic actions (e.g., banners, sit-ins) that breach perimeters.
- Reputational and Political Impact: Media coverage of protests could overshadow conference messaging, especially on contentious issues like Palestine or austerity.
- Health and Safety: Risks from weather, fatigue, or medical emergencies in crowds. Potential for violence if tensions rise, though most groups emphasise non-violence.
- Emerging Threats: Monitor for unannounced actions or spillover from unrelated events (e.g., the mentioned Reform Conference protest video, indicating broader political unrest).

Vulnerability Analysis

- High-Risk Periods: Opening day (September 28) and final day (October 1) overlap with multiple protests, increasing strain on resources.
- Locations: Secure zones mitigate internal risks, but external venues (e.g., restaurants, public spaces) are exposed.
- Participant Profiles: Delegates include vulnerable groups (e.g., elderly members, high-profile politicians), requiring tailored protections.

Recommendations

- Enhanced Security Measures: Increase police presence, deploy barriers, and use CCTV/AI monitoring around key sites. Coordinate with Merseyside Police for real-time intelligence sharing.
- Contingency Planning: Develop evacuation protocols, alternative venues for fringe events, and communication strategies for disruptions.
- Engagement and De-escalation: Liaise with protest organisers to designate safe assembly areas and facilitate dialogue to reduce confrontation risks.
- Cyber and Information Security: Monitor social media for emerging threats and protect attendee data from leaks.
